

ATROCIOUS CRIME AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

In the wake of lethal injection Thursday a week ago, we can call to mind the witness to life of Father

Rene W. Robert, former Franciscan and priest of this diocese. Anticipating the possibility that he be murdered, he insisted in his legal papers that he did not want perpetrators to suffer capital punishment, even though he did at another's hand.

[Please visit the "monument to life" outside our church front door and dedicated to Father Rene and Saint Teresa of Kolkata.

Fr. Guy]

UNITED STATES BISHOPS' CONFERENCE, April 13, 2017

[...] In his 2015 address to Congress, Pope Francis called for "the global abolition of the death penalty," as he explained, "I am convinced that this way is the best, since every life is sacred, every human person is endowed with an inalienable dignity, and society can only benefit from the rehabilitation of those convicted of crimes. . . . [A] just and necessary punishment must never exclude the dimension of hope and the goal of rehabilitation." The Catholic Bishops of the United States have echoed this call for many years, including in their 2005 statement A Culture of Life and the Penalty of Death.

The leaders of the Catholic Church have called, time and again, for an abolition of the death penalty here in the United States and around the world. The Church stands with victims of atrocious crimes and their families and urges justice. Those who mourn the loss of dear friends and family members experience deep wounds, and the Church stands in solidarity with them in their intense suffering. Indeed, serious criminal activity must be met with appropriate punishment. Yet, as Saint John Paul II wrote in his encyclical Evangelium Vitae, "the problem of the death penalty" must be viewed "in the context of a system of penal justice ever more in line with human dignity and thus, in the end, with God's plan for man and society." Although "[p]ublic authority must redress the violation of personal and social rights by imposing on the offender an adequate punishment for the crime," such punishment "ought not go to the extreme of executing the offender except in cases of absolute necessity: in other words, when it would not be possible otherwise to defend society" (no. 56). In developed nations such as the United States, where maximum security prisons can neutralize an incarcerated person's threat to the general public, such exceptional circumstances do not exist because "[m]odern society in fact has the means of effectively suppressing crime by rendering criminals harmless without definitively denying them the chance to reform" (no. 27).

It can be very difficult to think of mercy at a time when justice for unthinkable crimes seems to cry out for vengeance. The harm and pain caused by terrible sin is real. But during the Easter Vigil, we will hear from the prophet Isaiah, "Let the scoundrel forsake his way, and the wicked man his thoughts; let him turn to the LORD for mercy; to our God, who is generous in forgiving. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the LORD. As high as the heavens are above the earth, so high are my ways above your ways and my thoughts above your thoughts" (Is. 55:7-9).

When Jesus was born into this world, when He united all people in His death and Resurrection, He drew us more closely into the ways and the very life of God. As Pope Francis said in his 2016 World Youth Day address, "We must ask the Lord to give us the grace to be merciful to those who do us wrong. Jesus on the cross prayed for those who had crucified him: 'Father, forgive them, they know not what they do' (Lk. 23:34). Mercy is the only way to overcome evil. Justice is necessary, very much so, but by itself it is not enough. Justice and mercy must go together." This Easter, let us ask the Lord for the grace to infuse our justice with mercy. May those in Arkansas who hold the lives of these individuals on death row in their hands be moved by God's love, which is stronger than death, and abandon the current plans for execution.

Most Reverend Frank J. Dewane, Bishop of Venice
Chairman, Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development
