MAJOR CATHOLIC SOCIAL TEACHING

The Gospel of Life (Evangelium Vitae)

Pope John Paul II affirms the gift of life and the need to protect it at all stages. He proclaims the good news of the value and dignity of each human life while decrying the culture of death and calling for a renewed culture of life. The encyclical addresses a wide range of old and new threats to life, especially abortion, euthanasia, experimentation on human embryos, and the death penalty. John Paul II argues that we must be people of life who stand “for all life and for the life of everyone” (no. 87). The culture of death, he says, is caused by an overemphasis on individual freedoms and a lack of recognition of relationship with others. This mentality, reflected in materialism’s emphasis on “having” over “being,” must be replaced by one of solidarity (recognition that we are all one family) and seeing life as a responsibility (no. 23). The Pope notes that the family is the “sanctuary of life” (no. 59) and connects respect for life with the need for social and economic policies that support families and integral human development which promotes the dignity of the person (no. 18, 81).
